I am a teacher in AUSD						Enabling parents who enable their children. We are not doing parents or their children any favors when we coddle both parents and children. Students need to be held accountable for their work and their behavior. Parents need to encourage this. Schools need to support parents who are encouraging their children to learn to be responsible. This is a huge part of make sure that every children is ready for the 21st century.

How can I do my job as a parent (make sure my student is completing his/her work), if the teachers won't level with me and tell me exactly what is due, and when it is due? Try to reach them and provide them with the correct information. Sometimes, it is much easier to pass down information from them to those hard to reach parents.

I am a parent/guardian of a student in AUSD	Arcadia High School	Twelfth Grade	Advanced Placement or Honors, Performing Arts	2		My wife and I have always been involved, and we know lots of other parents who are as well, but it's still around 5-10 % of parents it seems. Band/colorguard performances, for example, involve the children of some 800 parents, yet it's the same 20-30 at every activity. I'm not sure how the district can improve this, or if it's even possible, but maybe there's a way to encourage parents to at least attend their kids' performances, if not volunteer occasionally.

I am a parent/guardian of a student in AUSD	Arcadia High School, Foothills Middle School	Sixth Grade, Seventh Grade, Tenth Grade	Advanced Placement or Honors, Performing Arts, Student Leadership (WEB, ASB, etc.)	3	I think parents help where they are welcomed. Since you don't listen to parents in high school - our concerns, parents feel no need to volunteer. This is the vicious cycle. If I have to hire tutors to teach my kids what they should have learned at school. Then you have failed me as a parent and most importantly my child. I don't feel like you care about our concerns so I don't volunteer. The same goes to the middle school. There is an awful teacher that all parents know about and yet she continues to teach/lack of teaching.	Stop supporting awful teachers.	Listen what the are the concern of the parents and kids. I want to tell you that if you do give parents and teachers surveys. Then, you will also see the teachers that are actually doing their job. My kids have had some amazing teachers in the district but unfortunately, they are not given the bonuses they so deserve. How is it fair that a great teacher gets $50,000/year and a horrible teacher gets the same pay? The system is broken.

I do not know what "authentic participation" means or implies. This sounds made up.	Not sure what this question means either. Why would a district stop something that it is not in control of? Continue to keep the parents informed via current and new technology methods (email, voice mail, and web).	Stop sending out the hard copied newsletters. Electronic forms are now widely adopted (html) while traditional print forms are expensive to produce and distribute. These are some of the areas that the District need to tackle when reviewing their budgets! The same resource(s) can be deployed to other needed areas!	Rather than hiring more resources, perhaps the District should start to utilize college interns. It is a win win situation for both parties. Keep us informed often and ask for our help.	Thinking that the same people can always do it all. Need better recruitment schemes and ways to fully integrate the community - old and new Arcadia.	Think I put this in the wrong section: Put more trust and responsibility into the hands of the students - teach them to own their educational experiences and press upon them that their involvement in school/school activities will determine success or failure of the system. 						Stop making it so hard to work on any problems at the high school, it's is like dealing with lausd, there is no accountability and there is the fear of retribution and if the teacher is mis behaving the parents are expected to speak to the teacher first, this can place a student at risk for grades and other retaliation and give bad teachers a a chance to create their own cover story. Again this is for the more egregious behaviors I have seen. The message I get from the high school is, send your kid give us some money and stay away.

Regular publishing and education on the healthy expected involvement and what this means requires cultural engagement and intentionality.	There should be reporting mechanisms for behaviors that crosses certain lines of protocol and ethics that do not router through the teacher themselves. I am a teacher in AUSD					Most Arcadia parents are very supportive.		There should be some parental accountability for attending conferences and for submitting all required paperwork before the first day of school. At the elementary level, some parents do not submit the paperwork until one or two weeks into the school year. Teachers and staff do not have emergency information which would be a problem in the event of an emergency. There is no accountability for these parents. In other districts, students do not get their class assignments until all paperwork is submitted.

The district should consider issuing bilingual written and verbal announcements. Because a high % of parents are new immigrants from Asia, they are not aware of the school activities as they simply can't read the flyers from school. It is important to help these new immigrant parents informed so their kids would have more chances to participate in school activities. Their families would be more willing to make financial contributions as the parents will eventually realize that their kids are the beneficiaries of the district's improvements.

That was great. I also like that the counselors respect that some parents want an update, and some want to stay behind &amp; ask all sorts of questions, and plan for an intermission break so that those who have specific questions can stay behind. Please keep up with letting us know of college visits and events at AHS, and in the area.	Can you update the photos &amp; announcements on the district website? I go there a lot, and it should be refreshed to showcase a wider variety of students in the full breadth of activities in which AHS excels (all competitions, all teams, all sports, all clubs, all activities, etc). Even the sports announcements are showcasing students who went off to college a few years ago - should be refreshed, please. Makes current students feel their achievements are not good enough to be showcased. Also need a central website for AHS athletics. Currently for my student, I need to go to the teacher's website to find the schedule. That should be under Athletics.

Make families aware of what it really costs to run various programs so they are more inclined to join the booster clubs and do their part by contributing their time and money. The latest AEF newsletter did an excellent job of pointing out that San Marino asks for $2,000 a student and that private schools ask for additional gifts of money too. Perhaps the school could let parents know how many volunteer hours go into each event and ask for a commitment of volunteer hours and/or money when students join clubs and teams.		The different groups, such as sports and the arts, are completely separate entities at AHS. Since we are one school, reminders and volunteer calls could go to all parents, not just ones associated with certain groups.

In recent years, there has been a severe decline in the amount of parent and student involvement in decisions made that greatly effect students and their academic career. Student, and Parent feedback is very important, and I feel that this survey is a step in the right direction.	It is my personal opinion that there has been a blatant ignorance of parent, teacher and student feedback that has been given to Arcadia Unified School District. It is also in my personal opinion that Dr. Joel Shawn is an incompetent leader who is unfit to head this school district.
						Again, this is a good step in the right direction, and I would like to see the district encourage students, teachers and parents to give their feedback, and for the district to accept more feedback like this in the future.

As in every scene, there is an 80:20 ratio of people who do most of the volunteering. Sometimes that very 20% quickly absorb the positions and events so there becomes a disinterest among the rest. We need those loyal volunteers but maybe they could break up and each call a handful of new parents to invite them to work with them. The personal touch makes a difference.	Don't stop....reach out.	Reach further...  Some of us are very busy and have several children and/or elderly parents to tend to. We want to become more involved but it is hard and feels unimportant by those who click together for every event. Middle schools and what I hear about AHS, parent involvement is not so good. Parents want to be involved, but there's few opportunities. Find creative ways to involve parents. We just want to help, stay involved, and connected with the schools our children attend.	Better utilize technology for communication. Utilize the website to provide more information on what's happening at the district/schools. It can apply to classrooms as well. One great way is to give each teacher a blog. This provides immediate communication to subscribers (kids and/or parents). Once parents know more about what's going on in the classrooms, we can engage conversation with our kids on those topics.

All committees that have a place for parents on them.	not sure	Be willing to listen to input about staff and have it make a difference. At least ask staff members to address issues that parents and students bring up. We're all adults here; we should be able to listen to constructive criticism and work on improving ourselves.

I am a teacher in AUSD					I think the parent groups are AWESOME on campus. In relation to other districts, we have incredible parents. We should ensure that these are not jeopardized in anyway and are maintained and continued. Something to think about in the future would be that as our society gets more and more mixed, the strength of 'ethnic only' groups are going to weaken (as is natural), so perhaps a way to unify all the parent groups BUT maintain their efficacy would be great. I think that parents should also receive much more support in the area of how to help their child at home.	Maintenance of sports games and communication with sports' parents that violent, inappropriate behavior is not supported by from staff or AHS. (Speaking of violent things that have erupted about parents...) In the support of parents at home, we could possibly think about meetings or 'life coaches' that are able to work with families to create environments that are really student-friendly. (There are students on campus with less-than-ideal situations at home...that really need someone to come to them and help them out.) In our effort to help students, many times we run into parents that do not have their 'act' fully together either... making it near impossible to help students.

Stop being blind to the help provided by the many parents including the help they provide the district by sending their children to after school programs. I am a teacher in AUSD					2	Parent involvement in SSLT, our awesome PTA, parent involvement in extracurricular activities, Parent AP night	We might be getting a little phone-blast desensitized. It's hard to pick out the ones that are important to us individually from ones that apply to other groups in the AUSD community.	We need to communicate to parents that they need to have realistic expectations for their kids and how to best support their healthy habits and balanced priorities. And we need to educate parents on how long/when to keep their sick kids home from school. A lot of parents are great on this and the kids put pressure on themselves. But there are a good 10-20% of parents with unrealistic expectations, who push too hard, and who insist a sick kid go to school when all they are doing is making their child stressed, sicker, and infecting everyone else.

As far as I know, the parent involvement is not doing anything wrong that needs to be changed or stopped.	The district should look into ways of using technology to better communicate with the parents. This way, it is easier to get parents involved.
